	Getting Started	1
20 minutes 20 minutes	 Explore the trend of women in politics in Canada: When was the first woman MP, MPP? Has your city ever had a woman mayor? What types of positions have they had when in Cabinet? (when they are appointed Minister, what is their portfolio?). How does this compare to male politicians? How many women currently sit in parliament? Discuss why in Canada, fewer women enter the political ring than do men.
20 minutes	Class could start with examining and discussing this article: https://www.cbc.ca/news/canada/edmonton/media-representation- women-politics-1.4453407 Make a list of female and male politicians in the media (Twitter feeds, social media, news reports, magazines.) Discuss: How are women described and critiqued? Examine the lang used and compare it to how male politicians are described. Are the criticisms about female and male politicians the same? Discuss the implications of the differences.

	Working on it
60-75 minutes	Have students work in pairs or small groups. Assign some students to be journalists and some Canadian female politicians.
	The journalist will 'interview' the politician. Questions could include, but would not be limited to: How/why have you become interested in politics? What has been your motivation? What barriers have there been? Who, if any, were your female role models? Were there specific policies or issues that drew you to politics?
	The interview could be on a mock news cast, or a magazine style program like 60 Minutes.
	Journalists could focus on the 'rise to success' of the politician, or scrutinising the politician about a particular issue or topic.
	Practice the interview
	Consolidate & Reflect on it
30-40 minutes	Present the interview to the class. Open the floor to the viewers to ask questions to the journalist or the politician.
	Discuss: How were your interviews different from the ones you originally researched? Does the way the media portrays women affect our assumptions?
